Alexandra Rogin

MEMBER
BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Alexandra is a litigator who focuses her practice on corporate and commercial litigation and professional liability, including matters involving business disputes, professional negligence, breach of contract, business torts, financial services, fraud, and medical product liability. Alexandra's practice includes a particular emphasis on the representation of businesses, executives, and health care providers and innovators in complex legal actions. She is involved in all areas of case management and phases of litigation. She has handled matters and argued before both trial and appellate level state and federal courts in Delaware and Pennsylvania, including successfully arguing before the Delaware Supreme Court.

Before joining private practice, Alexandra served as a judicial clerk in the U.S. District Court for the District of Delaware, home to one of the largest patent dockets in the country. As a clerk for the federal court system, Alexandra gained inside experience, which she has since been able to transfer into her private practice. In law school, Alexandra served as the managing editor of the Drexel Law Review.
