Daniel N. Reisman

MEMBER CHAIR, REAL ESTATE AND LAND USE

Dan Reisman is chair of the firm-wide Real Estate and Land Use Departments. He practices in the areas of real estate, land use, and corporate law.

Over the course of his career, Dan has developed a national practice representing buyers, sellers, developers, borrowers, lenders, landlords, tenants, and brokers in a variety of matters. His practice covers a wide range of asset classes, including multi-family housing, single-family residential, office, retail, hospitality, gaming, and industrial projects. He represents borrowers and lenders in both syndicated and single-lender real estate financings in connection with a variety of debt structures, including construction loans, permanent mortgage loans, secured revolving credit facilities, standby letter-of-credit facilities, and mezzanine loans. Dan has served as lead real estate counsel on transactions involving new market tax credits, historic tax credits, Fannie Mae loans, Freddie Mac loans, credit tenant loan financing transactions, and loans from public agencies. He prepares and negotiates a broad range of real estate documents, including agreements of sale, leases, complex loan documents, construction contracts, and documents subjecting properties to the condominium and planned community forms of ownership.

In his land use practice, Dan regularly appears before the Philadelphia Zoning Board of Adjustment and other government bodies in Philadelphia on behalf of owners, developers, private operators, landlords, tenants, and non-profits. He has also appeared regularly before the Planning Board and the Historic Preservation Commission in historic Haddonfield, New Jersey.

In his corporate practice, he represents clients in connection with the negotiation of organizational documents, such as partnership and operating agreements, and in fundamental corporate transactions such as asset purchases and sales. He has also developed a niche practice representing nonprofits — including both small, community-based nonprofits and several of the largest nonprofits in the Philadelphia region — in real estate, land use, and corporate matters.

Based on this breadth of experience, Dan is able to navigate through the entire land development process on behalf of his clients, from entity formation and structuring, governmental entitlements, financing, and acquisition, through construction, leasing, and development of the property.
