ECKERT SEAMANS

Government Affairs

OVERVIEW

Eckert Seamans' Government Affairs Group consists of attorneys and other professionals who have years of experience working with both the legislative and administrative process of government in Washington, D.C.; Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Boston, Massachusetts; and Richmond, Virginia.

Our Government Affairs team includes individuals who have held elected office as well as appointed positions in the offices of U.S. Congress, state legislatures and municipal government.

The firm's knowledge of how legislative bodies and administrative agencies function enables it to provide complete services in all aspects of government representation, including the development and implementation of solutions to address a client's administrative and legislative concerns. Eckert Seamans' attorneys and other professionals analyze and summarize legislative and administrative proposals and assess their impact on a client's business operations; coordinate actions between executive and legislative branches of government; assist in the development and presentation of testimony; draft legislation or regulations; advise on parliamentary, regulatory, or other procedural issues; and analyze political and policy considerations. In addition, the increasing complexity of the legislative process has fostered the firm's development of a group of professionals who concentrate on managing all facets of a legislative initiative, including grass roots and public relations coordination.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS

The most common situations for which a legislative approach may be appropriate arise when a state legislature has enacted, or is in the process of enacting, legislation that will directly affect the business operations of a client, either positively or negatively.

In providing legislative representation to a client, the firm, as necessary, will:

- Identify legislative committees with jurisdiction over, and individual legislators with an interest in, the subject matter involved.
- Identify proposed legislation to serve as the vehicle for a legislative amendment to address the client's problem.
- Meet with legislators and their staff members to represent the client's position and recommend possible solutions.
- Draft legislative language and explanatory materials.
- Attend legislative hearings and drafting sessions.
- Draft testimony.
- Advise on parliamentary issues that may arise regarding the legislative solution.
- Provide technical assistance to the legislators and their staffs throughout the process.
- Assist in identifying governmental funding streams and departmental expenditures.

ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

Eckert Seamans' Government Affairs team can effectively address administrative problems within the federal, state, and local regulatory and administrative agencies. Our representation covers all aspects of agency administration, including regulatory compliance counseling, permitting, licensing, enforcement activities, and adoption and amendment of regulations and policies.

Sample activities undertaken by the firm's Government Affairs team include tracking and responding to regulatory actions of federal and state agencies that affect a client's business and operations; resolving disputes that arise concerning grant requirements; assisting clients in all aspects of the federal procurement process, including meeting procurement requirements for third-party contracting; satisfying federal transit labor requirements by negotiating with the appropriate employee representatives and advocating transit authorities' positions before the U.S. Department of Labor; developing and negotiating funding agreements for major capital projects on behalf of local governmental bodies; working with the firm's litigation attorneys to preserve judicial remedies; and pursuing employment matters before federal agencies and international organizations.

In addition, our Aviation Group counsels domestic and foreign airlines on regulatory matters before numerous federal agencies, including the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Justice, Department of Homeland Security, Transportation Security Administration, National Transportation Safety Board, Bureau of Customs and Border Protection, U.S. Trade and Development Agency, U.S. Department of State, and U.S. Department of Commerce.

GOVERNMENT PROCUREMENT

Our Government Affairs Group also includes attorneys who have wide-ranging experience assisting clients throughout every stage of the government procurement process, from identifying market opportunities, to advising on proposals, to drafting and negotiating contracts pursuant to the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) and other government authorities.

Our Government Affairs Group also works closely with our Commercial Litigation Group that possesses expertise in handling various types of procurement related litigation, such as bid protests, disputes between prime and subcontractors, and defense from enforcement matters, such as suspension and debarment actions, litigation related to the False Claims Act, and assisting clients with government audits and investigations.
