OVERVIEW

On the ground, both public and private entities involved with the operation, maintenance, location, and construction and expansion of airports turn to Eckert Seamans attorneys for advice and representation. Our lawyers represent airports before local, state, and federal courts and administrative agencies regarding numerous regulatory issues related to airport operations. The firm also utilizes its multi-disciplinary approach to address specific challenges to aviation clients in areas such as contract law, procurement, real estate and construction, public finance, labor and employment, and litigation. Firm attorneys have represented airport authorities in the construction of new terminals, the negotiation of airport concessions programs, the improvement of safety areas on site, financing major maintenance and construction projects, and the negotiation of complex leasing programs.

It is anticipated that in the coming years many airports will embark on new projects centered on upgrades to runways, capacity, and the aviation system itself, including new air traffic control towers, radar equipment, and intermodal connections. The firm also provides representation on other legal matters affecting businesses in the aviation industry, including tax, antitrust issues, regulatory compliance, OFAC sanctions, environmental issues, bankruptcy and restructuring, insurance, and security and facilitation.
