Min S. Suh

MEMBER

Min Suh focuses exclusively on employment-based immigration law, representing corporations across diverse industries such as financial services, manufacturing, information technology, education, healthcare, and nonprofit organizations. She advises international companies on immigration matters related to acquisitions, mergers, global mobility, and workforce restructuring.

Min is highly experienced in I-9 compliance and worksite enforcement, helping employers develop effective compliance programs. She regularly handles government investigations, including on-site audits, depositions, and appellate litigation.

With over 20 years of experience, Min is a strong advocate for the role of robust visa programs in enhancing employee morale and productivity—key factors in attracting and retaining top global talent. She coordinates the firm's multi-disciplinary approach, integrating labor and employment law, tax counseling, employee benefits, and other related areas to support the global mobilization of personnel.

Previously a legislative assistant at a national government relations firm, Min remains actively engaged with government agencies and representatives on immigration-related legislative and regulatory issues. She provides proactive counsel to employers and individuals navigating employment-based immigration challenges.
