Annemarie DiNardo Cleary

MEMBER

Annemarie DiNardo Cleary is a successful commercial litigator with nearly 25 years of experience. She focuses her practice on financial services litigation, including creditor's rights and bankruptcy, and labor and employment matters. She represents clients in state and federal courts and before administrative agencies on a wide range of commercial issues, including breach of contract claims, defense of lender liability claims, business torts, commercial lease disputes, defense of employment-related claims, and complex, multi-party litigation.

As part of her financial services practice, Annemarie works with lenders to maximize their recovery on failed commercial real estate development loans and other problem lending relationships. She also has represented Chapter 11 debtors, lenders, and bankruptcy consultants and has extensive experience defending lender liability claims and wrongful foreclosure suits.

In her employment practice, Annemarie advises employers regarding compliance with state and federal employment statutes and defends them against claims in state and federal courts relating to Title VII, age discrimination, family and medical leave, fair labor standards, wrongful discharge, covenants not to compete and other employment-related claims. She also counsels and represents employers in defense of Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) charges and Virginia Employment Commission (VEC) claims.
